The Latest Maine Murder.

Lewiston Journal.

The death of Timothy Shortsleeves, the Portland bar-tender who was shot by his employer on the 13th of August, completes a case of murder. The assassin has been in hiding since the crime was committed, and it certainly is not creditable to the Portland police force that he has not been arrested ere this. There have been no signs of much of an effort to capture him. Perhaps the police rely on the act that O'Neil is under $3,100 bonds on liquor cases and expect his bondsmen to deliver him up.

The question is sometimes asked "why hasn't O'Neil, the murderer of Shortsleeves been arrested." We can say on authority that from the very first notifications were made of the affair to the police officials in al cities and towns, descriptions of O'Neil for warded and thorough search made by the mediately after the murder, a policeman went out to all parts of the State to try and

The Maine Water Gas Company has llustration of this fact is shown in the il-House, at Peaks' Island, to which we have the Opera House is a structure of considera ble pretension; that being a summer theatre the doors are frequently open in the evening, land there are a number of persons standing in the further lobby, as well as on the ground outside the house, while every seat is packed to the walls. With the usual gas lighting objects on the stage [would need essarily be more or less indistinct to the most remote spectators. With the new water gas, during the past week, the stage has seemed as brilliant as if lighted by electricity, and, under all the above conditions there has been no difficulty in seeing perfectly all that was going on on the stage. It may be asked, by questioners, what was the member of the audience, and how many lights were required to produce this brilliant mination. This is a question easily the farthest spectator was over one hundred feet, and only twenty-two gas jets were oscenium lights and ten footlights, but rooms, the actors have felt as if they occu pied quarters superior, as far as lighting is concerned, to the majority of the best thea tres in the country. Everyone knows how these parts of a summer theatre are gener ally illuminated. A few kerosene lamps ness visible, and fail to show off the stage effects that are so necessary to a proper repesentation of a spectacle or light opera with their elegant costumes and their scenic displays, in which fairy dells, and the horrors of Hades are to be exhibited. But at Green wood Garden Opera House the sixteen box der lights, in addition to the footlights, in press one with the idea, from the results the cent lights, for every feature of the stage is brought out in bold relief. In all there are sixty-four lights in the theatre. Mr. Knowl ton is delighted with the success achieve and he is determined that in the future he never will be without the Maine Water Gas Company's lights. It will be of great interest to the patrons of Greenwood Garden Opera House to know that Mr. Knowlton is going to make great improvements in the theatre the coming season. One thing he has determined upon that will prove not only a great addition to the house, but als have an important bearing on its interio adornment, is the hanging of a large centre gaselier of twenty-five lights. With the gaselier, and the changes he proposes in the arrangements of some of the stage lights, he will have a summer theatre that will pres hard the best establishments of the kind anywhere on the coast of New England, and it is well known that there are several of these theatres that are unsurpassed by any of the kind in the country. These results it can plainly be seen will be due to the admirable light of the Maine Water Gas Company. We may add, in connection with Stove Company of Philadelphia, New York, Chicago and Boston have used, and do use, the same water gas employed by the Maine Water Gas Company, as the fuel for their stoves and have gained not only a great repntation for their stoves thereby, but find it
